

Self-Leadership Track

“Our development is our choice. Those accumulated choices prepare us to take advantage of unexpected opportunities or weaken our abilities and set us up to be victims of change. Our leadership development choices raise us up or drag us down.” – Jim Clemmer

If you want to be a better leader to others, start with leading yourself well. Growing our leadership is also a dynamic process. It begins at the center of our being and develops in multiple directions. This is a suggested training and development track to increase your personal leadership.

- GSC Leadership Basics- Curriculum offered by Governmental Services Center that helps you focus on your personal leadership purpose, vision, and values.
- Choosing to Be Accountable- Virtual workshop offered by Governmental Services Center that helps you take responsibility for your choices.
- GSC Managing Work Relationships- Classroom workshop offered by Governmental Services Center that helps you learn more about your own communication preferences and become more effective at work.
- Now, Discover Your Strengths- Book by Marcus Buckingham & Donald Clifton that helps you discover what you’re great at so that you can build passion and commitment by working from your strengths.
- The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People- Book by Stephen Covey that explores the principles of effective self-leadership, influence, collaboration, and improvement.
- Building Trust- CommonwealthU course that looks at how trust develops, its importance in the workplace, and how to improve our own ability to build and maintain it.